Some tech companies in Matsue established an organization "Open Source Society Shimane" in connection with Matsue City's "Ruby City MATSUE" project

Establishment ceremony in Sep. 2006

Without these two things, Far End Technologies was never founded.

I met Redmine and launched a website "Redmine.JP". It publishes information regarding to Redmine in the Japanese language.

The server was in my home

Founded Far End Technologies Corporation

Do you know what does "far end" mean?

"far end" is the opposite end of communication wire, such as optical fiber and metallic cable.

10 years ago, I wanted to create a business that utilizes the Internet.

We are connected to the Internet via communication wire.

the Internet

I thought "far end", the opposite end of wire, is the Internet.

"Far End Technologies" means "The Internet Technologies"

Published a book "入門Redmine"

the concept played a great role in spreading Redmine in Japan.

Started paid service of "My Redmine", a hosting service of Redmine. We had less than 5 paid customers at the end of 2009.

More and more enterprises in Japan started to use Redmine.

Search volumes on Google for "Redmine" exceeded "Trac" in Japan.

(Ogawa and Sakai)

"Redmineによるタスクマネジメント実践技法"

Far End Technologies moved to Matsue Center Building (33m<sup>2</sup>)

"Ruby City MATSUE" ad sign

I became a "Contributor" on redmine.org.

Administrator: Jean-Philippe Lang Evil, Toshi MARUYAMA

Since that, I have been checking patches, triaging issues, and giving feedbacks.

Planio launched the service for Japan with Far End Technologies.
